The night at a glance

For each close Senate and governor race, the county table shows the margin the Democratic side needs in each county, with every vote counted, for a statewide tie. Running ahead of these numbers in most of them means on track to win. States are listed by the time their last polls close; "(most 8:00 PM)" means most close earlier. When will we know? shows the time most polls close.

Share: the county's share of the 2024 statewide vote. 2024: the Harris–Trump margin there. To tie: what the Democratic side needs there for an even state, from our forecast's county pattern. Bellwether: the county nearest the state's 2024 margin. Swing: the biggest move from 2020 to 2024. In by: when the county had passed 90% of its final count in 2024: an hour of election night (ET), a later day (Wed, Thu, Fri, Nov 11, Nov 15), later (after Nov 15) or n/a (the feed had no data). Early, late (where sourced): in 2024, early means the county was 90% in by 9 PM ET and late means it was not yet 90% in at 11 PM ET; both come from the same table as In by. Count by hour: the share of the state's final count in at each hour in 2024; Wed 9 PM, Fri 9 AM and Nov 15 use the last archived copy before that time. 2024 was a presidential year: 2026 can differ. Write the real margin in the box once a county is fully counted.

Sources: 2024 presidential results by county and by House district; poll closing times from state election offices; legislatures and measures from Ballotpedia; count order mainly from AP and MIT; the count by hour, when counties were in, and which counties reported early or late in 2024 from archived copies of AP's count, and news reports for Wisconsin and Nebraska. Ballot measures

We don't forecast these. What a Yes vote does, from Ballotpedia. Tick the result.

Virginia Question 1 7:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: adds a state constitutional right to reproductive freedom, including abortion, with third-trimester regulation allowed.

Maryland Question 3 8:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: provides that the constitution sets no criteria for congressional districts; its district rules apply to state legislative seats.

Massachusetts Question 3 8:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: replaces party primaries for state offices with one primary for all candidates; the top two advance to the general election.

Missouri Amendment 3 8:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: repeals the 2024 reproductive freedom amendment, bans most abortions and bans gender transition treatments for minors.

Missouri Proposition A 8:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: upholds House Bill 1, the 2025 congressional map; a No vote repeals it and keeps the 2022 map.

Arizona Proposition 144 9:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: amends the constitution to require government-issued ID to vote and to provide that only citizens may register and vote.

Colorado Amendment 86 9:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: requires mid-decade congressional maps to be approved by the redistricting commission and the state supreme court.

Colorado Amendment 87 9:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: replaces the flat income tax with graduated rates of 3.7% to 8.4%, with revenue for schools, health care and child care.

Nevada Question 6 10:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: adds a state constitutional right to abortion, with regulation allowed after fetal viability (second required approval).

California Proposition 3 11:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: makes permanent the top income tax rates on high earners set to expire in 2031, with revenue to schools and colleges.

California Proposition 40 11:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: levies a one-time 5% tax on wealth above $1 billion to fund health care, food assistance and public education.

California Proposition 42 11:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: bars new taxes enacted after Jan. 1, 2026 on retirement holdings, personal assets or savings, and bars retroactive taxes.

Idaho Proposition 1 11:00 PM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: creates a state law right to reproductive freedom, with abortion regulable after fetal viability except in medical emergencies.

Alaska Ballot Measure 2 1:00 AM ET — Yes ☐ No ☐
Yes: repeals top-four primaries and ranked-choice general elections, restores party primaries, and ends a donor-source disclosure rule.

How to read the night

A count is the order the precincts report, not the result. Three things to check before you trust a lead.

1. A count is not a lead

A candidate who trails by L points with a share c of the vote counted needs the rest of the vote to favor them by L × c ÷ (1 − c) points. The more is counted, the harder the catch-up: with half in, the rest must swing as far as the gap; with nine in ten in, nine times as far.

So ask which votes are left (which counties, mail or Election Day) before you read a trend. The county tables show where they are.

COUNTED	THE REST MUST FAVOR THE TRAILER BY
25%	0.33 × the gap
50%	1 × the gap
75%	3 × the gap
90%	9 × the gap

2. Which votes come first, and which come last

How fast each state counted, hour by hour in 2024, is on the next page. What AP and MIT reported about earlier elections (2020 and 2022, as dated; sources on the web page):

Later votes leaned, the last time

Democratic	Michigan (2020), Wisconsin (2020), Nevada (2022)
Republican	Georgia (2022), North Carolina (2022), Ohio (2022), Florida
Counted late	Michigan (mail counted late; big cities report late); Wisconsin (mail counted late; big cities report late); Nevada (mail counted late; big cities report late); Oregon (mail counted late); Alaska (mail counted late)

3. Rules that can change the night

Georgia	A candidate needs more than half the vote (50 percent plus one). Otherwise the top two finishers go to a runoff on December 1, 2026. Source: Georgia.gov: Election Day, General Election Runoff; Georgia.gov: Vote in Runoff Elections. Read 2026-10-31.
Maine	Election night shows first choices only. If no candidate has more than 50% of them, ranked-choice rounds are run later in Augusta; the state says a statewide tabulation can take about 1.5 to 2 weeks. Official results come up to 20 days after the election. Source: Maine Secretary of State: How does the RCV tabulation process work?; Maine Secretary of State: Ranked Choice Voting Resources (updated Oct. 6, 2026). Read 2026-10-31.
Florida	If unofficial returns show a candidate or a measure losing by one-half of one percent or less, a recount is ordered (the candidate may ask in writing that it not be made). Source: 2026 Florida Statutes, s. 102.141(7). Read 2026-10-31.

To tie is each county's expected margin if the state ends exactly even, taken from the county-by-county pattern in our own forecast and weighted by 2024 turnout; where we have no pattern for a race, the table says it moves every county by the same amount instead. Real counties will not hit them exactly: use them to see which counties matter, and by roughly how much. Links to every source: callthemap.com/election-night-guide.

How fast each state counts

How much of each state's final presidential count was in at each hour of election night 2024. Fastest first, by the hour each state passed 90%.

From AP's count as archived (sources on the web page). Bold: 90% or more. n/a: no reliable figure (AP's feed had no data for a large county overnight). –: no archived copy for that time. 2024 was a presidential year with more early and mail voting than a midterm, so 2026 can differ. Wed 9 PM, Fri 9 AM and Nov 15 use the last archived copy before that time, so a share may be a little higher by then. Each figure is a share of the state's own final count, not a vote total.
